The Daily Quote

"Speaker John Boehner faces a divided conference and some of the trickiest legislative waters he's had to navigate since the fiscal-cliff fight in trying to manage a farm bill fight in the House. The nearly $1 trillion measure is supposed to come to the floor for a vote next week, but may be pulled from the calendar due to a lack of support, according to congressional...sources... GOP leadership is not eager to move any more bills that divide their majority, but the issue is further complicated by Majority Whip Kevin McCarthy's support for the farm bill. ... 'As a longtime proponent of top-to-bottom reform, my concerns about our country's farm programs are well known,' Boehner said. 'But as I said on the day I became speaker, my job isn't to impose my personal will on this institution or its members.'...GOP aides said that approach is emblematic of how Boehner is running the House, especially after an attempt to forge a grand top-down deficit bargain last year with President Obama failed."
